Eric Spiegel (SIS, '88) is an accomplished senior technology manager with significant experience in software product operations and implementations. Eric is currently Vice President of Virtualization Solutions at GANTECH, a systems integrator based in Columbia, MD. After graduation, Eric moved to the Washington DC Metro Area and spent ten years as a software developer and technology consultant. He has since spent almost two decades working in various senior management roles at multiple early stage software firms, including co-founding a software start-up. Eric also is a successful technology journalist who provides commentary on a wide range of IT management and career topics. He holds a BS in Information Science and an MS in Information Technology Management from the Johns Hopkins University - Carey Business School. Eric and his wife Jennifer (CAS, '88) have two young daughters and reside in Ellicott City, MD. The Spiegel Family endowed the Jennifer and Eric Spiegel Book Award in 2000, which requires University of Pittsburgh SIS and CAS undergraduates to submit essays on technology and communications topics. Over 25 students have received the award which provides funding for students to purchase books at the University Book Store.
